

How can it be that the sea

is more welcoming than the land?

A question for the EU.

In Moria Refugee Camp, Greece, there are thousands of people and no running water, unheated muddy tents, horrible living conditions and no access to education. Human rights are being violated on a daily basis. Journalists and photographers are not allowed to go inside the camp, NGO staff members are asked not to take pictures. Moria is only one of the many shame spots of a failing European migration policy.
